

McGill To Take On New Look As Expansion Plans Evolve

These five girls are the finalists in the contest for Queen of the Engineering Fall Informal. From the left they are: Margot MacWilliam, Donna Kerner, Margot Lafleur, Sue Hausner and Lillian Singer. The smiling gentleman is Assistant Dean Joly of Engineering who was on the panel of judges choosing the finalists. The Engineering Queen will be chosen at the dance on Friday, November 3.

Green Addresses Students

The Hon. Howard Green, Minister of External Affairs, will speak at McGill today under the joint auspices of the Progressive conservative club and the United Nations club. His topic will be "Canada's Role In the United Nations". The meeting, which is open to the entire body, will take place at 1 pm in the ballroom.

Mr. Green, a native of British Columbia, graduated from the University of Toronto, and immediately afterward joined the Canadian armed forces. He saw service in France, and entered Germany in 1918 with the Army of Occupation. In 1919 he was discharged with the rank of captain.

LAW PRACTICE

On his return to Canada, he resumed his studies at Osgoode Hall. After graduation, he returned to Vancouver to practise law.

He was first elected to the House of Commons in 1935, and has since represented either Vancouver South or Vancouver Quadra.

He became known as the "Green Scourge" for his intensely critical attitude during the Conservatives' lengthy period in opposition, and was promoted from MP to Opposition Front Bench.

After his party came to power, he served as Minister of Public Works, and then as Minister of External Affairs, the post he now holds.

HON. HOWARD GREEN

Asked to comment on politics as a career, he said "It is a worthwhile and satisfying career for one who truly wants to serve in public life, who is prepared to do the work involved, and who is also prepared to be patient.

Mr. Green's speech follows one made at McGill by Hon. George Hees, Minister of Trade and Commerce.

Student Council Rejects Referendum At Carleton

The Carleton University Students' Council have endorsed an amended judicial committee and honour system, but have declined to take the risk of putting it before a referendum to test student reaction. This is because council members fear it would be rejected.

The honour system is based on a code of personal ethics. If a student breaks a law, he is supposed to turn himself over to the judicial committee. In past years this system has been ineffective, and for this reason the judicial committee has now been empowered to investigate and report on misdemeanours.

This was the system that members of the Council wished to put before the students for ratification; others, however, stated that it was a constitutional amendment, and not a matter for referendum. Following a two-hour debate the matter was put to the vote, resulting in a tie. The President of the council, Norm Jamieson, acting along normal constitutional lines, broke the tie with a negative vote.

Mr. Jamieson had previously done his best to convince the council to sponsor the referendum, stating that it was the sole way to make the student body at large aware of the moral implications involved. He said it knew too little about the honour code and system.

The voice of the students may still be heard, however, for if one third of the student body signs a protest against the amendment a referendum must be held.

McGill's campus will take on a new look during the next five years as the University's $55 million building program evolves. The present plan includes marked changes in the area of the Arts Building, the erection of Medical and Biological Sciences Centres in McIntyre Park, new Physics and Chemistry buildings, an extension to the Library, and the creation of a new Union.

These concrete plans were announced by Dr. James in a press conference yesterday. They were drawn up keeping in mind a long range (100 year) program for even further extension of the campus.

NEW UNION

The new Union, to be called the University Centre, is to be built on the site of the present Union. Although student leaders pointed out that the Presbyterian College site, proposed last year, was a better location, the Committee which drew up the overall plans felt that this land should be reserved for Arts Buildings extensions.

As matters now stand two alternatives for a new union are facing the architects. One advocates the razing of the old building and constructing a completely new edifice on the site. The other solves the problem by building a twelve-storey tower on the land behind the present Union and renovating the old structure. Students who were informed of this latter idea seem to be unanimous in their ridicule of the plan.

ARTS PROJECT

On the campus itself, the major aesthetic change will be the area in front of the Arts Building which will be terraced in a manner similar to the Library. Classrooms will extend out of what is now the basement.

A one storey structure will be built beside the west wing and will extend to the site of Presbyterian College, most of which will be demolished to make way for a 10-12 storey building. This project will house a 600 seat Auditorium, two undergraduate reading rooms, office space for four departments, the Library School, the School of Social Work, the Institute of Islamic Studies, and numerous lecture rooms.

Work on the Medical Sciences Centre in McIntyre Park (the undeveloped land bounded by Pine, MacGregor and Drummond) should begin almost immediately. During the next two or three years a Biological Sciences Centre will be adjoined to this new medical building.

DEPARTMENTS

The departments of Botany, Genetics, Psychology, and Zoology will occupy this building. This will leave the Biology Building to be renovated and then used for administrative offices which are presently scattered around McGill. The Medical Centre will provide space for all those doing graduate studies in medicine, the old building being retained for Anatomy and Dentistry.

To relieve the over crowded physical science facilities, new Chemistry and Physics buildings are planned. Construction of the former, to be located in an "L" shape on the corner of Sherbrooke and University, will begin within a year. The other, to be built behind this new Chemistry Building, is to be started within the next three years.

The vacated old Chemistry Building will be given over to the departments of Geography, Geology, and Meteorology.

TWO PHASES

The building plans are divided into two phases — 1963, and 1963-66. Some money has been earmarked for all projects in the first phase although $7.5 million is still required to finish all building slated for completion in 1963.

University authorities hope that this sum will be forthcoming from the Provincial government and the Canada Council. Included in this necessary money is $1,777,000 which must be obtained before construction can begin on the new Union.

When construction on the first phase has been completed, the university expects to be able to have decent facilities for 9,500 students. McGill's present size is not sufficient to give proper instruction to this year's freshman class when they reach third and fourth year.

ENROLLMENT CEILING

Thus the present enrollment ceiling of 9,500 will be effective until 1963, at which time a committee will consider whether the second phase of construction will allow for an increase in the student body.

It is expected that the number of students doing Postgraduate work will climb rapidly as the new facilities become available. The faculty will increase by approximately 60 per cent in the next five years. The completed program will give the university almost twice its present floor space.

The total cost of the project will be slightly more than $55 million. The university has so far received $25 million towards this end.

Erratum

The Daily wishes to correct any ambiguity attached to the "Football Game Rioting" story which appeared on the front page of yesterday's edition.

McGill students had nothing to do with the stealing of Tom Skyeck's equipment in Kingston and are not being held responsible for it. The blame clearly rests on the Queen's University students and it is they who are being asked to pay the $400. The Students' Society referred to in the story's head is the Queen's Alma Mater Society and the riot took place in Toronto after a Queen's-Varsity game.

Latest Or Last ?

INCLUDED IN THE BRIEF presented by Dr. James at yesterday's press conference on McGill development plans was a section dealing with the construction of a modern University Centre in the first stage of the program. The report stated that "although the University has at the moment less than half of the money that will be required for the construction of a modern University Centre to replace the existing Students' Union, the Board of Governors has resolved that this project is of such urgency that architects will be appointed immediately to study the site and draw up the plans in the hope that sufficient additional financing may become available from one source or another early in 1962 so that actual construction may commence during the summer of that year".

From this lengthy summary, we must conclude that the Board of Governors is sincerely interested in rectifying the present situation of increasingly deteriorating union facilities. However, in the face of past experience, it is extremely difficult to put much faith in the tone of finality struck in yesterday's release.

In February of 1959 the reconstituted New Union Committee, representing the McGill student body, was advised by the Board of Governors to look into the possibility of proposed construction of dining and lounge facilities on a McTavish Street site, with the balance of student activity to be carried on in the Union. When the Committee objected to this plan of divided locality and activity, and it became apparent through further study that the McTavish area was not large enough to house all student activity, a detailed proposal was made to the Board concerning construction on Milton and University. In October of 1959, the Board of Governors officially and conclusively approved the Bishop Mountain House site, relegating this area to construction of a New Union.

In the summer of 1960, however, further complications arose. The Chairman of the New Union Committee at that time, while browsing through the Presbyterian Record, a magazine published by the Presbyterian Church, discovered that the University was no longer in possession of the Milton-University site. In exchange for the Bishop Mountain House, McGill had acquired Presbyterian College, and with this development, negotiations began anew on construction of the long-needed new Union, this time in the desirable location of the former Presbyterian College.

Yesterday, the New Union Committee was given their first official indication of yet another change in plans. The program has now run full circle and has returned to consideration of the old Sherbrooke Street site. Even in this official consideration of proposed construction proposed to the press, there seems to be some diversion of opinion. Although the concentrated summary quoted at the beginning of this editorial describes "the construction of a modern University Centre", the program report prepared by the Senate Committee on Development and approved by the Board of Governors on October 16 speaks in terms of construction "by rehabilitation of the existing building".

In view of this accumulation of incidents and difficulties, this board would certainly not stand in favour of any immediate dissolution of the New Union Committee.

Letters To The Editor

A New Plan For Fraternities

Dear Madam :

An evil and unnecessary social cleavage exists at McGill University owing, principally, to the presence of fraternities.

The point is that fraternities are Excellent Associations in themselves because they supply the need for a smaller loyalty than university or faculty for their members and provide places for conversation and social activities without which a university is a dead and ugly place. Unfortunately, however, only about 10% of the students are members. For thousands this university is then a "street-car stop" institution.

How can a university, emphasising the meaning of the word university as a community or corporate body, recognise any club or society but those to which All students may join no matter what their appearance, social standing, race or creed, barring the fact that men should be kept out of the women's swim team.

Thus, I wish to forward through the McGill Daily, the barest outlines of a plan meant to be of a particularly challenging kind to fraternity members and sympathisers whereby we might supplant fraternities with something finer and more all-embracing, to the gratitude of generations of students yet to come and a credit to those with the maturity and brains enough to master the difficulties.

Realising that this is not a

"living-in" university, recognising that, shall we conclude by saying that I misinterpret the function of fraternities and that this note is yet another voice of the "have-nots" raised against the "haves"? I will admit that some will answer "yes" but others will say "nay" for do not misinterpret me when I state that my object was to throw down the glove of challenge, to ask whether you honestly feel that the university really is the place for unnecessary social divisions.

In closing, I would like to see a reply from a responsible fraternity council official, not damning my proposals for I have refused to damn fraternities, but striving to point out the feasibility of this plan and what he proposes to do about it. Strictly speaking, the reply should come also from the Students' Executive Council.

Explaining The Cafeteria

Dear Madam,

I was sorry to read that Mr. Hill has been using the Students' Union to subsidise the bread and butter industries of the country. (Wants Food Not Tableclothes, Daily, Oct. 18.)

Upon investigating Mr. Hill's complaints it appears that there is some misunderstanding as to how much he paid and what he was paying for. The Cafeteria does not charge for extra butter, but does charge .05 for additional rolls or orders of bread, (two slices per order). This is quite reasonable when meals are being provided as economically as they are in the Union.

There is a new caterer operating the Union's eating facilities this year and judging from the increase in volume the majority of students approve of the new look. In addition the Union Board of Managers has made an effort to improve the appearance of the Grill Room and the Cafeteria.

It is natural that the odd problem will crop up in day to day operations and our kitchen manager is interested in hearing of any difficulties. He also wants to get to know the students. His name is Mr. Arnold and one thing I'm sure of is that he doesn't shout in "a harsh moderate voice".

As an aside, the Union would like to suggest that, in order to ease the cramped conditions in the Grill Room between 12:00 noon and 2:00 pm, all those who bring their own sandwiches and are only buying milk should sit upstairs in the lounge. There is a milk machine in the lounge and we hope that everyone who can will use it. If there is no response to this request further steps will be taken to make room for those who purchase food and have no place to sit.

Bill Hutchison,
President,
Students' Union

Stop Crowds At Elections

Dear Madam,

Those who have visited the Book Store in the Arts Building recently will have seen that the best laid plans of mice and men can really get fouled up. The whole trouble is that there are just too many people.

It is not the intention of this letter to suggest that some of the money pouring into the till might well be used to erect a new and half decent Book Store. Rather, with the example of the unfortunate store in mind, this letter is concerned with campus elections.

In the past, the revered custom has been to scatter several polls in the lobby of the Arts Building. This used to be a very practical custom. Just about everybody passed the polls at least once a day and there was a 50-50 chance that they would stop and vote.

Last year this beloved tradition began to crumble. There were just too damn many people passing by and too few willing to brave the crowd and fill out a ballot.

Can you imagine the scene this year? It should be harrowing.

It is high time the Students' Executive Council instituted election reform. Remove the polls from the Arts Building and place them in the spacious yet convenient auditorium of Redpath Hall.

A great deal of water will run under the bridge between now and election day, but a small amount of planning in the meantime will save a "horrible" crush.

John Thompson,

Two Religious Lectures By Reverend Pelikan

The Reverend Jaroslav Jan Pelikan will give the second and third of his lectures on the theme "The Light of the World" today at 10 am and 3 pm in Divinity Hall.

Professor Pelikan, of Chicago University, is appearing here as the opening speaker in the W. L. Anderson Lecture series, instituted at Presbyterian College in 1949. The purpose of these lectures is to bring outstanding thinkers in the religious world to the McGill campus.

Born in Akron, Ohio in 1923, Professor Pelikan gained his Ph.D. from the University of Chicago, his Litt.D. from Wittenberg University, and was ordained into the ministry of the Lutheran Church. He is married and has two children.

He has taught at several Universities, and after finishing this year at Chicago where he has been a full professor since 1953, will become Titus Street Professor of Ecclesiastical History at Yale.

Professor Pelikan has written many books, including "From Luther to Kierkegaard" and "Fools for Christ". He is the Editor of Luther's Works, and Departmental Editor for Religion for the Encyclopedia Britannica. He also contributes to several theological publications.

The Professor is giving three lectures here under the general title: "The Light of the World", which is the theme of the World Council of Churches Assembly, to be held at New Delhi, India, in November. He spoke yesterday on "God as Light", and will speak today on "God's Darkling World" and "The Radiance of the Father".

Western University Debaters Ban The Broads On Campus

Western University's Debating Club decided at its first meeting that women should be abolished from the University.

Mike Hamilton and Mike Vaughan, upholding the motion, stated that "a woman should be a wife to her husband and a mother to her children, and thus should be educated along those lines". They proposed that a women's college be founded for this type of education.

MANHUNT

Further, women were more interested in getting a man than an education, and the men on campus felt that they would get more work done without them. As nearly 80% of women students get married soon after leaving university, it was felt that the money spent on their education would be more useful as a dowry.

Heather Johnston and Peggy Richardson, defending women, said that women are good debaters; also if it were not for women on campus the male population would not bother to shave or wash.

Male comments: Shaving and washing is a waste of time.

Debating Union Begins Inter-Faculty Tourney

The Inter-Faculty Tournament sponsored by the Debating Union begins today. Architecture will compete with Engineering in Rm 213 of the McConnel Engineering Building, while Arts and Science will struggle with Law in the Union Clubroom. Both debates start at 1 pm.

Mark Feifer, Inter-Faculty Chairman, has announced the week's topic: "Resolved that Capitalism is destined to lose its struggle with Communism in the underdeveloped nations." Debates will be held every week, and finalists will compete for the Inter-Faculty Shield in January. All students who are not listed as Senior Debaters are eligible to participate. Feifer stated that "the success of the tournament depends largely on the interest and participation of the members of all faculties".

The Novice Trials will be held on Thursday, October 26 and Friday, October 27. Successful participants in the Trials will form the Intercollegiate Novice Team.

Novices will be required to support either the affirmative or the negative of one of the following topics: "Resolved that Labour organizations should be under the jurisdiction of anti-trust legislation"; "Resolved that separatism for Quebec is inevitable"; "Resolved that gambling should be legalized"; "Resolved that Columbus made a mistake". Speeches must be five minutes long.

Carlebach is the centre of a growing movement in the United States which has responded to his rendition of traditional folk-songs. His tunes range from sadly majestic to lively melodies.

Tickets for the event are now on sale at Hillel House, 3430 Stanley Street. Registered members will be admitted at $1.00. General admission will be $2.00.

Martin To Address Dental Undergrads

Dr. C. P. Martin, Post Retirement Professor of Anatomy of the Faculty of Medicine, will address the first meeting of the Dental Undergraduate Society on "Development of the Human Face".

SPORTS BEAT

by LENNY FLANZ

While the McGill Redmen finally hit the win column on Saturday, the picture isn't as rosy as it appears.

TORONTO WEAK

In the first place, thirty points fielded against a team such as Toronto is no great accomplishment. The Blues were minus the services of Norm Turner; Turner quit the team last Thursday, supposedly because he wasn't seeing enough action. Be that as it may, the fact still remains that Turner is the best signal-caller that Toronto has and his absence was singularly notable. Rookie quarterback, Keith Acheson, doesn't even come close to Turner's potential, either as a passer or as an apt play-caller.

Nor were the Blues weak solely at the quarter slot. Strength along Hogtown's defensive or offensive lines was definitely lacking and their linebacking situation was certainly hindered after their first string corner linebacker sustained a broken hand.

In addition to these deficiencies, the Blues were noticeably weak at fullback. Achison was certainly not a passing quarterback and it was a foregone conclusion that if Toronto was to go anywhere it was to be along the ground.

This, of course, necessitates good fullbacks and even in this, Varsity was sorely lacking. Big Jim Murchie is a case in point; Murchie is one of Toronto's best hockey players but he should have stayed on the ice. Every time he carried the ball, he had to carry so much of his own bulk that he never even got started.

REDMEN INCONSISTENT

In the second place, although McGill managed to garner thirty points against this inept opposition, it was obvious that the play was spotty and sometimes quite ineffective. Sure, the Redmen picked up fourteen points early in the game, but it's also true that for the rest of the first quarter and most of the second, the Red and White had slackened off considerably and seemed to be contented to rest on the fourteen point cushion. This pattern of spurts and declines persisted throughout most of the game and it's not a good sign. A team that's hungry keeps right on fighting and doesn't give the opposition a chance to catch up. If it weren't for the fact that Toronto was so weak, the score might have been a lot closer.

A team that's hungry doesn't manage to salvage a mere three points when they have succeeded in penetrating inside their opponents fifteen yard line. This happened on no less than three occasions and the grand total of these deep thrusts was a measly three points — this is indeed poor. Yes, the Redmen came out hungry but it didn't take much to satiate their appetites.

In the third place the situation isn't as rosy as it appears because of the ensuing consequences.

FICKLE HISTORIANS

In the preceding weeks it has been all too obvious that a good part of the team wasn't too concerned over the double loss. Undoubtedly it was felt that they had lost two games last year and had then gone on their merry way to the championship. Thus, after losing the first two games this season, the persistent thought was that they could do it again.

Well, this isn't a happy state of affairs. It was done last year and it is possible that it can be done again this year; but it doesn't have to happen that way. History can repeat itself but let's not take it for granted that it will. Don't expect the other teams in the league to roll over and die. In order for the Redmen to walk off with the honours they're going to have to fight hard for it: remember that a single loss at this point in the season would pretty well spell "finis" to this year. If the Redmen keep this in mind and also the fact that it is by no means inevitable that they will win the rest of their games, they will have taken an important step in the right direction.

The initial step was taken last Saturday but this is not sufficient. What is needed is a fierce determination to win and a full realization that only they can make history repeat itself. Western and Queen's certainly aren't taking it for granted that it is only a natural course of events for McGill to cop their remaining games, so why should the Redmen?

All this criticism may seem too harsh following Saturday's lopsided victory but the fact is that for the last three quarters of the game McGill was not playing up to its full potential.

In the first quarter the Redmen demonstrated excellent ball control and Skypeck was calling a superb game. However this brand of play didn't continue and if the Redmen are to be successful they will have to be more consistent.

HOCKEY

Senior and intermediate hockey practices will commence on Monday, October 30, from 5:30-7 pm for the seniors and 7-8 for the intermediates. Thereafter daily practices will take place. Players must register at office #3 in the Currie Gym before Monday.

And the band played on

The McGill Redmen band will don their blood-stained white ducks to march in full force in Toronto next Saturday. They were sort of shaken up from the last game but we feel confident that they will recover in time.

An Engineer student named Newty,
Constructed a bridge of great beauty,
But a reckless young man
Drove his car on the span,
Down came car,
down came bridge,
down came Newty.

Penny-wise and dollar-wise,

The student who would like to rise,

Will use this saving stratagem —

A bit each week in the B of M!
